

POLICEMAN MURDERED ON HIS BEAT

James McGrath Shot
Down on Battery St.,
Burlington, Shortly
After 7 O'clock Last Night.

HIS ASSAILANT
NOT CAPTURED

Officer Was Probably Arresting the Man Who Is Thought to Be a Deserter from Fort Ethan Allen.

Burlington, May 13.—James McGrath, one of the night policemen and watchman on the lake front was shot and fatally wounded at 7.30 o'clock last evening at the corner of Main and Battery streets. The man who committed the murder immediately after ran down to the lumber yard. McGrath was taken to his home but died on the way there.

A man was arrested last night at Basin Harbor as the suspected murderer, and was brought here this morning by Officer Dillon of Vergennes. Fred Torrence of Jay, N. Y., an insurance agent, who left here on the 7.30 train, about the time of the murder last night, was released.

The man arrested at Vergennes in a freight car early today says his name is John Thompson, a tramp, en route from Montreal. He wore soldier's shoes and his shirt answered fairly well the description of the witness to the deed. A revolver was found in the car. The hearing is now on.

The suspect arrested at Vergennes in preliminary hearing, said he deserted from Fort Ethan Allen, Wednesday, went to Montreal, passed through here last evening for New York. As a matter of fact he jumped a freight at Shelburne.

The conductor was telegraphed to Vergennes to hold him found a 38 calibre revolver in the car, four chambers of which were empty, corresponding to shots fired at McGrath. Williams' stories conflict. He was identified by the witness of the deed as the right man and will be held.

There was one eye witness to the crime, Joseph Labarge, who saw every detail from a window in his house, 30 Main street. He says that he saw McGrath and a strange man walk up from the lumber yard together about 7.30 o'clock. They came up the middle of Main street, and were engaged in conversation. When opposite Labarge's house, which is the second one below Battery street, they stopped and faced each other. Suddenly the stranger pulled a revolver from his pocket and directing it point blank toward McGrath, fired two shots.

Both took effect as the pistol was not two feet from McGrath's chest. The policeman staggered and attempted to walk towards Richard's boat shop on the corner. The stranger started back about ten feet and fired at the unfortunate McGrath again. He then ran toward the lumber yard, and wheeling about took one last shot which is supposed to have gone wild. He then disappeared in the lumber yard McGrath then fell over uttering a sound. The sound of the shots naturally attracted attention and very soon a large crowd assembled at the spot. The ambulance was telephoned for, also Dr. McSweeney. Everything possible was done for McGrath, but the murderer's aim had been too true and he died before reaching home.

George LeClair, a clerk at the Russell House, almost opposite the point where the man fell, ran to the scene and realizing the case was a desperate one returned to the house and telephoned to Dr. McSweeney, to police headquarters, for the ambulance and for a priest. Willing harkness hastened after the priest and physician and within a short time both were on the scene. Dr. McSweeney, after examining the man's wounds, realized that they were critical.

Then it was that a scene which is seldom witnessed on the streets of this city took place. The wounded man was lying on the ground with the boat house as a background and a pile of lumber on the opposite side filled with people who had gathered from the surrounding neighborhood. At the head of the dying man knelt a woman of the neighborhood with prayer beads in her hands reciting the rosary and nearby repeating the responses. In the center of the crowd stood Father Gillis of the cathedral administering the last rites of the church, with Dr. McSweeney at his side. The ambulance soon arrived and started for the officer's home, 187 No. Champlain street, but the man died in a few minutes without regaining consciousness.

Mr. McGrath died somewhere between Main and Bank streets on Champlain street, while on his way home in the ambulance. An examination was made at the house by Drs. F. K. Clark and P. E. McSweeney and three bullet holes were found. The one which evidently proved fatal was the one which entered about two inches below the right nipple and one-half inch in toward the middle of the body, passing down obliquely about the middle of the left arm two inches and remaining under the skin. This bullet was extracted and was found to be of .38 calibre, the same calibre as used by the cavalry. McGrath's beat lay in the region between Main and College streets, one of the darkest spots in the city. The entire police force was on the spot soon after the crime had been committed and ransacked every nook and corner for the assassin, but without avail. He is described by LeBarge as a man weighing about 145 pounds, with a dark mustache. He was dressed in dark clothes.

There is only reason apparently why policeman McGrath should be a target for a murderer, and that is that he arrested two men in the railroad yard about 1 o'clock yesterday morning, thinking they might be two of the many deserters from Fort Ethan Allen. They were about to board a freight car when taken. They claimed they were not soldiers and gave their names as John Wilson and Richard Murphy. They were placed in jail for safe keeping.

The murderer is supposed to be a deserter from Fort Ethan Allen whom the officer was trying to arrest. Frank Drake, a cavalryman, was arrested in the lumber yards at 10 o'clock last night and was placed in jail as a suspect. He wore a blue uniform but over that he had on fatigue clothes, the garments worn by soldiers when doing work about the post. He denied all knowledge of the murder, saying that he left the post intending to desert and brought his fatigue clothes with him to cover his uniform and thereby conceal his identity. He said he went to the lumber yard to wait for a favorable opportunity to take a train. Drake was placed in jail to await further examination but the officers do not believe he killed McGrath.

Francis Lavalee, a watchman in the yards of the Shepard & Morse Lumber Co., told the police that he saw Officer McGrath in company with another man just previous to the shooting going in the direction of Battery street, the officer having his hand on the man's shoulder. When passing within hearing distance he heard the stranger say, "If I go back they will put me in the guard house." The officer is said to have replied, "I think I best that you should go back." In a few minutes shots were heard but the watchman had passed out of sight on his rounds. The watchman soon afterward saw a man resembling the man who is supposed to have been McGrath's prisoner run down through the lumber yards toward the ship. A short time after the watchman saw a boat pull away from the shore and disappear toward the breakwater. Watchman Lavalee's description of the man tallies with that of Mr. Labarge except as to height, he claiming that the man was tall. He also claims the man wore a soft hat.

At a late hour in the evening a blood hound owned by A. C. Lowell, a special policeman, was taken to the scene of the murder and placed on the trail. He took the scent at once and followed it to the dock along the patch which Watchman Lavalee saw a man running directly after the murderer. At the dock the dog lost the scent and could not find it again. It was the opinion early this morning that the man had taken the boat and gone to the New York shore or skirted along the Vermont shore.

McGrath was formerly in the meat business and was well known in the city. He was about 40 years of age, and leaves a wife and three children.

BARRE MAPLE SYRUP.

Served on Griddle Cakes at a Bridgeport, Conn., Newspapermen's Lunch.

Other people than those living in Vermont apparently know what good maple syrup is. It will be seen from the following clippings from Bridgeport, Conn., papers that maple syrup made in Barre is liked down there. On Tuesday noon J. A. L. Julian, formerly of Barre, gave a griddle cake lunch at a restaurant to some eight of his associate working newspaper men. He served, with the cakes some maple syrup he had sent him from Barre. Here is what City Editor McGovern of the Bridgeport Evening Farmer, the leading Democratic paper, says of the feast.

"Like mother used to make.—John A. L. Julian of the Evening Post, reporter staff had sent him from his former home 'amongst the green hills of Vermont, and this noon he treated a large number of newspaper friends to a feast of griddle cakes and maple syrup at the 'Horseshoe' lunch room. The dinner was greatly enjoyed."

And here is what the Evening Post, an independent paper, says of the lunch: "Real maple syrup enjoyed.—A party of eight working newspaper men were given a lunch of griddle cakes with real Vermont maple syrup yesterday noon at the 'Horseshoe' restaurant by one of their number. The syrup was the real thing and was pronounced the 'best ever,' it having come from Barre, the Granite City, where it was made by the man who received first prize for it at the world's fair at Chicago. The cakes were especially delicious and all present expressed themselves as highly pleased with the lunch."

PARTED WITH HIS WATCH.

Shelburne Man and His Chronometer Become Separated in Burlington.

Burlington, May 13.—Charles Beauchemin, who owns a little farm in Shelburne whereon gold was discovered a few years ago, the mining of which has not been pushed owing to lack of funds by Mr. Beauchemin, is mourning the loss of his $15 watch.

He claims some one picked his pocket and the first he knew of the loss was feeling the chain dangling at his waistcoat. He said the man who he thinks did the job was in a certain store when Beauchemin went to do some trading. He asked this man into a back room to have a drink and when he came out the man bade him good bye and went away. He made known his loss to a passing policeman but the watch has not been recovered.

Base Ball Game Tomorrow

NO TROUBLE TO WIN GAME

Goddard Overwhelmed
Montpelier.

LATTER NEVER IN GAME

Score of Yesterday's One-sided Contest
Was 10 to 3—Second Game
May 30.

Montpelier seminary bit the dust before her old rival, Goddard seminary, yesterday afternoon in the first base ball game of the season between the two schools, the final score being 10 to 3 in favor of the home team. The weather was perfect for base ball and a crowd which banked both sides of the field was in attendance. The score was too one-sided to make things especially exciting, though the interest was kept up by the efforts of one side to make the score higher and the plucky digging of the other side to keep it down.

Fraser was in the box for the home school and did excellent work, striking out 11 men and keeping the seven hits made off his delivery well scattered, so that only one of the three scores made by Montpelier was directly occasioned by a hit. The other two points were made through errors. Goddard's weakest point was her outfield. Several times the ball found its way to the ground for very unnecessary hits.

Huntington did the twirling of the ball for Montpelier and did quite effective work in striking out 10 men, though at times he was landed on pretty hard. Four singles were pounded out by Goddard. In the second inning, one being stretched to a four bagger through an error of the center fielder who let a hot grounder from Fraser's bat slip between his feet and roll over the bank. Before it was finally gathered up Fraser had crossed the four bags, making the fifth score in that inning.

In the first inning Montpelier went to bat first and easily ran in one score through loose fielding. Drennan pounded out a grounder to Butler who fumbled and the batter reached first. Seaver let a ball get by him and Drennan took second, also third on another passed ball. Seaver on a trick play threw the ball to Berry who dropped it and Drennan scored. Davis fanned the air. Hull hit to Fraser who threw Scott out at third. Clark dropped an easy fly from Batchelder's bat and Hull went to second. Batchelder went out on a grounder to Butler who fielded to first retiring the side.

Berry was the first man on Goddard's batting order and he landed a pretty single over second base and stole second. Fraser fled out to center. Seaver went out on a grounder to short and Berry got third. Turner was hit by the ball and got first. Butler fanned. Score 1 to 0, in favor of Montpelier.

Second inning. Rogers flied out to Berry. Wells fanned. Huntington was given a base on balls and Drennan got two bases on a single to Blake who made an unsuccessful attempt to throw Huntington out at third. Scott flied out to Turner. For Goddard Blake singled over second and Pike bunted to the pitcher who threw wild to second trying to catch Blake and both were safe. Each moved around one base on a passed ball by the catcher. Clark hit a grounder to short who threw home but the catcher dropped the ball and Blake scored. Pike went to second.

Stuart struck out but the catcher dropped the ball on the third strike and threw the ball to first putting out Stuart, but Pike scored on the last attempt for a double. The catcher let Berry's third strike go by him and Clark scored. Berry stole second and came home on Fraser's hit through the center fielder. Seaver was hit by the ball, took first and stole second. Turner fanned, closing the inning. Score 3 to 1 in Goddard's favor.

The third inning opened by Davis being out on a fly to Berry. Hull and Batchelder both fanned. Butler went out on a fly to second. Blake fanned. Pike got bases on balls. Clark hit a grounder to short who fumbled it. Pike went to third and scored on a passed ball by the catcher. Stuart got first on a grounder to third baseman who fielded too slow and Clark scored. Berry went out on a fly to first. Score 7 to 1, for Goddard.

Fourth inning. Baldwin singled between short and third. Rogers hit to left and Baldwin went to third. Wells got first on a grounder to pitcher who threw Baldwin out at plate. Huntington singled over second and Rogers scored. Wells went to third and scored on a wild throw to second by Seaver. Drennan and Scott fanned. For Goddard: Fraser out on a fly to center. Seaver was hit by a ball and stole second. Turner put a two bagger over the left field fence scoring Seaver. Butler and Blake fanned. Score 8 to 3.

At the opening of the fifth inning Davis struck out and Hull went out on a grounder to pitcher. Batchelder sent a grounder to Berry and was out. Pike fanned and Clark got first on a fumble of his grounder by third baseman. Stuart got first on a grounder to third who threw Clark out at second. Berry flied to the centerfielder who dropped the ball but threw Stuart out at third.

Baldwin singled over third in the sixth and Rogers got first on a grounder to Berry who threw Baldwin out at second. Wells walked. Huntington fanned and Drennan went out on a grounder to Butler. Fraser flied a fly to left. Seaver got two bases on a fly to right. Turner was out on a fly to third. Butler singled by short and Seaver scored. Blake fanned.

In the seventh Scott fanned and Davis went out on a fly to Stuart. Batchelder flied on an error to Stuart. Hall got first out to Pike who in turn flied out to right. Clark went out on a grounder to Huntington and Stuart fanned.

Montpelier was easily disposed of in the eighth inning. Baldwin was out on a grounder to Fraser and Rogers did the same, while Wells fanned. Berry singled over third. Fraser sent a grounder to pitcher who threw over first and Berry scored while Fraser was being caught between first and second. Seaver went out on a fly to right. Turner reached first on a grounder to second and stole second. The catcher threw the ball over second baseman and Turner tried to get third but was caught. That was the end of the scoring. Montpelier's attempt in the ninth inning was futile. Huntington out on grounder to Berry. Drennan singled over short and Scott singled to left. Davis fanned and Goddard.

WAR HERO'S SAD END

James Houlihan Committed Suicide.

HANGED IN A JAIL CELL

Former Barre Man Was Cutting Stone
at San Diego, Cal., When Arrested.

James Houlihan, who left Barre a short time ago, committed suicide in the San Diego, Cal., jail a few evenings since. The details have just been received in this city. Houlihan who was a member of the G. C. N. U. at Los Angeles, went to San Diego to work on the new Granger block. Soon after arriving in the latter city he was arrested for intoxication and lodged in the county jail. He committed suicide in his cell by hanging, removing his suspenders and making an improvised noose of them.

A Los Angeles paper says that Houlihan was in good standing with the union and that he was known as an efficient workman. "He left no relatives in Los Angeles as far as is known. His home was in Barre, Vt. The man was about 35 years of age."

Houlihan was a member of the United States Marine corps during the war with Spain, and saw actual fighting in Cuba. He was in the fight at Guantanamo, when the U. S. troops were attacked by the Spaniards, while they were in bathing. The former rushed from the water, and seizing only their cartridge belts and rifles fought the Spaniards and defeated them. Houlihan returned from the war in poor health and was placed in a Massachusetts hospital, where his life was despaired of for a time. He recovered and came to Barre, remaining here a short time.
